Over 75 Years in the making: A history of the Great Smoky Arts & Crafts Community

No one planned it when the Great Smoky Arts & Crafts Community developed in Gatlinburg, it just happened. For years, artists and craftsmen practiced their specialty in downtown Gatlinburg. Sometimes in studios and galleries and more often, out on the street, where visitors and residents could watch them develop their creations. People came and watched, and the craftsmen did what they do best; they crafted. Around 1937, John Cowden and several other craftsmen increased traffic, excessive commissions were impacting their ability to decide to move their craft shops out to the Glades, where many of them owned and set up their own shops, studios, and galleries, in or near their homes. They invited the visitors to Gatlinburg to come out to the Glades to see their facilities and to look at their wares.
